From altered visions of butterflies to luminous botanicals, stargazing to dollebrities, the wonders of an infra-red world to the uninhabited polar regions of Antarctica, desolate buildings and old trollies in San Francisco to sandy California beaches, Bay Area organic farms to the populous streets of Florence and Paris, the spectrum of images in Stanford's Continuing Studies Art 44 group show will hold your gaze.

For the 3rd year, the varied portfolios of Stanford's Continuing Studies Art 44 class will be represented at Modernbook Gallery in Palo Alto. Last year's reception brought over 500 guests to the gallery and this year we hope to break that record. Candidates are juried into the class, which is taught by Brigitte Carnochan. Photographers learn how to select works, publicize, and prepare for a show, and Mark Pinsukanjana and Bryan Yedinak, the owners of Modernbook Gallery, help to explain the business aspects of the fine art world.

From traditional silver gelatin prints to computer pigment prints, this show contains all the elements that make photography a fascinating and evolving medium. The exhibit showcases the creativity, ingenuity, and inspiration of these emerging artists, giving them a popular venue to test their talents. The photographers in this wide-ranging exhibit are all over the photographic spectrum and look to engage, excite, and amuse the art enthusiast. Please feel free to contact the gallery for more information.
